

PROFILE

Arlington County, Virginia

March 2003

Arlington County is an urban area of about 26 square miles located directly across the Potomac River from Washington, DC. No incorporated towns or cities lie within Arlington's boundaries. Originally part of the ten-mile square surveyed in 1791 for the Nation's Capital, the portion on the west bank of the Potomac River was returned to the Commonwealth of Virginia by the U.S. Congress in 1846. This area was known as Alexandria City and Alexandria County until 1920, when the County portion was renamed Arlington County.

Arlington County had an estimated population of 193,847 as of January 1, 2003, reflecting an increase of 13.4 percent since 1990. It is among the most densely-population jurisdictions in the country with a population density of 7,513 persons per square mile—more than cities such as Seattle (6,714 persons/sq. mi.), Cleveland (6,213 persons/sq. mi.) and Pittsburgh (6,017 persons/sq. mi.). Arlington's population is increasingly diverse—about 40 percent of residents are Hispanic, African American or Asian. One in four residents was born outside of the U.S. and one in three speaks a language other than English at home. Arlington residents are extremely well educated. Over 60 percent have a bachelor's degree or higher and 30 percent have a graduate or professional degree.

Although perhaps best known to visitors as the home of the Pentagon and Arlington National Cemetery, Arlington has maintained high quality residential neighborhoods while supporting continued managed growth. Residents are actively involved in the community; there are over 50 civic associations and over 100 community and service organizations in the County.

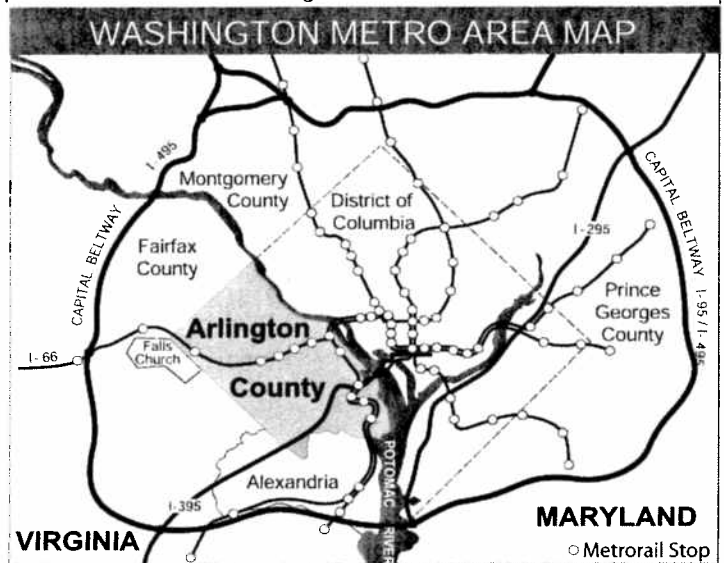

The County's central location in the Washington metropolitan area, its ease of access by car and public transportation, and its highly skilled labor force have attracted an increasingly varied residential and employment mix. The County has focused high-density commercial and residential development around Metro rail stations in the Rosslyn-Ballston Corridor and the Jefferson Davis Corridor (which includes Pentagon City and Crystal City), while maintaining lower density development in the remainder of the County.

The County has over 200,000 jobs. The majority of jobs are in the Services (44 percent) and Government (28 percent) sectors. Almost two-thirds of all jobs in the County are located either in the Rosslyn-Ballston or Jefferson Davis corridor. The County's unemployment rate in December 2002 was 2.2%, among the lowest in the region.

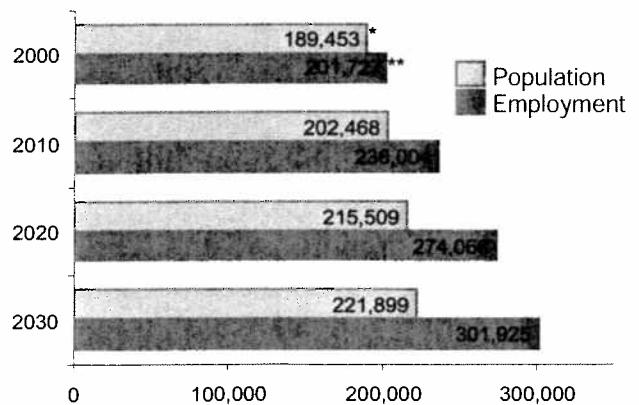

Total office space more than doubled in size since 1980 to a total of over 50 million square feet of gross floor area. This is made up of over 40 million square feet of private office space and about 12 million square feet of federally-owned space. The Rosslyn-Ballston corridor has over 21 million square feet of office space and the Jefferson Davis corridor has over 14 million square feet of office space.

The total office and commercial space has greatly expanded the County's tax base. During 2002, Arlington's real property tax base was evenly divided between commercial and residential properties, enabling the County to maintain the lowest tax rate in the Washington region. There was about 365,000 square feet of net office absorption in 2002, and a 4th quarter office vacancy rate of 10.0 percent, compared with 17.7 percent for Northern Virginia.
